Day 2 – Ta Dzong, Rinpung Dzong and Kyichu Lhakhang – The Paro Rinpung Dzong is one of Bhutan's most impressive and well known dzongs, and perhaps the finest example of Bhutanese architecture you will see. Rinpung means 'fortress on a heap of jewels'. At the top of the hill above Rinpung Dzong is an old watch tower that was renovated in 1968 to house the National Museum. The unusual round building is said to be in the shape of a conch shell. It was completed in 1656 and was originally the ta dzong (watch tower) of Paro Dzong. Originating from the 7th century, Kyichu Lhakhang is one of the oldest Monasteries within which is one of the most sacred shrines in Bhutan. It is an important pilgrimage site comprising a twin set of temples.
Overnight – Tenzinling

Day 3 – Thimphu Valley - Established as the capital in 1961, Thimphu has a youthful exuberance that constantly challenges the country’s conservatism and proud tradition. The ever-present juxtaposition of old and new is just one of its appealing qualities. Crimson-robed monks, Indian laborers, gho- and kira-clad professionals and camera-wielding tourists all ply the pot-holed pavements, skirt packs of sleeping dogs, and spin the prayer wheels of Clocktower Square, and nobody, it seems, is in a hurry. Thimphu is the world’s only capital without traffic lights. A set was installed, but the residents complained that it was impersonal, and so gesticulating, white-gloved police continue to direct the ever-increasing traffic. As well as being a classic Bhutanese anachronism, it may well be the city’s most photographed spectacle.
Overnight – Tenzinling

Day 4 – Taktsang Hike and Drugyel Dzong - Taktsang Monastery also called Tiger’s Nest is situated on a nearly vertical cliff at 3000m altitude north of Paro in Bhutan. A number of famous masters have meditated in caves near the current monastery. Guru Rinpoche in his manifestation of Dorje Drollo mediated on the Kagye cycle. After him, many great masters followed; among them were Milarepa, Padampa Sangye, Machik Lapdron and Thangtong Gyalpo. Drugyel Dzong is situated 14 km from Paro at the end of the road. Drugyel village is lying nearby (3 km in direction of Paro) This Dzong was built in location chosen for control of the routes to Tibet. In 1647 the Shabdrung Ngawang Namgyel erected the Drugyel Dzong, just north of Taktsang, in commemoration of the victory over the Tibetans in 1644.
